PORTLAND PLAN

ix different school districts serve some 78,000 students in Portland. Even if you're not a student at one of Portland's 140 public schools, all of us Portlanders are affected by what is going on in those schools. These schools are not just places for young people to spend hours each day; the school buildings and grounds are a shared community asset that has the potential to benefit all of us.

What goes on inside — and outside — Portland's public schools is a key to our city's success.
